Lecture and reading materials:

The course syllabus lists the lecture and reading topics with expected dates for each. These lecture notes largely review the course text but also other supplemental sources. While students are expected to read the course textbook, the other supplemental materials listed on this page are optional for students. At the beginning of each lecture there is an overview/outline for the topic. The lecture notes are found on the lectures page in d2L as well on the public web. In places of discrepancy between the two sites the <http://rgtonks.ca/Courses/Health/> linked version will be taken as correct.

Audio Podcasts: There will be audio podcasts loaded into d2l for each lecture topic. This will allow students to listen to the lectures and follow through the lecture notes as if they are in class.

Activities:

Each week there will be an activity for students to complete for a total of 15% of the course grade. These will involve generating answers to key questions, making summaries of internet sources or published articles pertaining to the weekly discussion topic. These activities will be posted each week for students to complete within that weekly time period. As we move through the topics pertaining to the various facets of health and psychology that we explore, we will engage in activities that complement the lecture portion of the class. In addition to posting your thoughts and answers to these activities you will also be expected to discuss the postings of other students (see below).

Discussion: In addition to posting your thoughts on the activities and study questions, you will also be expected to respond to other student's postings. In other words, for each topic covered you will be expected to post your activity information AND also make a reply to at least one other posting by another student, hence you will be making at least two discussion board postings for each topic.

Health Journal: Students will be asked to record thoughts and observations about health as the course progresses and record them in a journal that will be submitted at the end of the class. The topics for these journal (blog like) entries will be the course topics as we move through material. These will essentially be reflections on one or more issues at hand.

Class Stress Project:

In class we will examine the topic of stress and health along with regular physical activity and relaxation. As such you will have the option of undertaking tai chi chuan, yoga, or meditation as part of this class activity. Varying degrees of participation are acceptable, where students are free to participate in one or another condition (active, resting, control). Students will complete the collection of stress assessments as part of this project, as well as a critical review of the project itself. The stress inventories must be done during the weeks assigned (4, 7, 10, 13) and they will be due on Dec 1. The Critical review 2-3 pages will be due on Dec 15th.

Written assignments:

There are two options for grading essays in this course. Students will have to decide which option they will follow by week 6.

Option A - Reports:

There will be two take home reports. The reports will involve short essays, each worth 15% towards the final grade. The essay questions will be drawn from the collection of weekly study questions. The reports will be take-home where students will answer each short essay in about 800 - 1000 words each. See the course syllabus for dates.

Option B - Term Paper:

Rather than completing the two take-home reports, students are given the option of writing a longer, more in-depth paper on a topic of their choice. For those accepting this option, it is expected that each student will examine an issue in Health Psychology in writing a term paper. The papers are to be approximately 8 pages typed double space (12 point font only) in the standard APA style. If you are not familiar with this style of referencing and paper writing please take a look at the APA publication manual (6th edition).

While everyone would like to get an A+ on their paper it is usually those who start early and work carefully on revising over a few drafts that get those top marks. To facilitate this process students will be expected to hand in a draft outline by week 6 of the semester. This is designed to help the student get a good start on his or her paper as well as to ensure that the paper is written on an appropriate topic. Generally speaking the papers can be on any topic that relates health and psychology, but students will be guided to focus one or another topic from within the course material. Students are expected to retain the outlines with instructor comments on them and attached them to the end of the term paper when they hand it in. This essentially serves as a contract between the instructor and the student over the exact topic of the paper. Paper is worth a total of 30 % toward final grades.

Topics for the term paper will vary but the bottom line is to examine something in the field of health and psychology. Some suggested possibilities are: reviewing the efficacy of prediction of the health belief model or theory of reasoned action as applied to one area of research, reviewing the nature of stress or stress responses for a given population, reviewing coping styles or techniques and their efficacy, research on psychoneuroimmunology for specific demographic or cultural populations, communication styles and the benefits or challenges associated with them, issues surrounding hospital stays or compliance with medical regimens, characteristics of health care providers that lead to better or worse health for individuals, alternative cultural models of health and healthcare as applied to specific diseases or populations, the role of physical activity in health and wellness, theories of pain or methods of treating chronic or transient pain, the problem of phantom pain, research on one or another life-threatening illness, international health and research on programmes and their efficacy. This is not an exhaustive list, but only a few suggestions.
